RESOURCES

There are a variety of professional, instructional and curricular resources that can be used to help educators learn more about and implement inclusive practices. At the professional level, there are numerous organizations which have web sites with information pertaining to inclusion such as the Council for Exceptional Children, the International Reading Association, and the Florida Inclusion Network. Miami-Dade County Public Schools has a web site with an abundance of resources on inclusive practices such as mini tutorials which are organized in a question and answer format.

The resource section includes information about supplementary materials including software and assistive technology that are useful with students of diverse abilities (source/contact information).

Curriculum Materials

Students with disabilities must have access to all instructional materials that are being provided to students in the general education setting to ensure full participation and involvement in the classroom. Here is a list of a few sources of supplemental materials and suggested supplemental materials that will assist in accommodating students with special needs in a general education classroom.
